

Wednesday, 8 May

4pm Economics Teaching Workshop (4-6pm)

Teaching Value Judgements in Economics

» This workshop will focus on the topic of value judgements when teaching economics. Despite their importance, value judgements can be tricky to teach, and this often means they don't get the attention they deserve, especially at undergraduate level. The workshop, delivered by The Centre for Economy Studies, will explore where value judgements enter economics, how to teach students to identify and communicate when value judgements are being made, and how to discuss values critically without pushing any particular perspective onto students. The workshop will be interactive and will present a range of constructive solutions.

7pm Panel Discussion on AI and Economics (7-8pm)

AI's Impact on Labour Markets and the Economy

» Artificial intelligence (AI) has led to widespread changes to many aspects of our lives. These changes, along with considerable uncertainties surrounding the future development of AI, have led to important debates about the appropriate and ethical use of AI, how impacts might differ across groups and sectors, as well as how policymakers should react. At the core of many of these debates is how we can safely leverage the vast potential of AI for the benefit of humanity as it reshapes the nature of work. This pre-conference panel discussion will focus on the implications of AI for labour markets and the economy, and also consider how AI can be used as a tool for economics research and analysis.

8pm Pre-Conference Reception

This pre-conference event, kindly sponsored by the Irish Economic Association, will take place following the AI panel discussion.
